

My style

What is your style?

My style is calm and observant. I keep my temper under control and prefer watching and waiting to acting immediately. I do not prefer being the center of attention, however if a leader is needed I will try to step up to the plate. I want everyone to succeed who deserves it.

What i value

When do you like people to approach you and how?

I like them to approach me if I am in a good mood or if I seem to be talkative and open. I want people to feel like they can trust me and that I am easy to talk to. I want people to enjoy working with me and for them to feel comfortable asking me a question.

What i value

What do you value?

I value patience and quality. I prefer for work to be done with thought rather than just spread loosely onto a page. I value when time is put into a project and having evidence that it was not just thrown together minutes before. I enjoy seeing the patience to sort through all of the possibilities and bringing the best to the top for use.

How best to communicate with me

How do you like people to communicate with you?

I like people to communicate with me face to face or directly in some form, rather than grouped up with others or just loosely referred to. I struggle focusing in groups and excel a lot more when I am able to talk face to face with those who need to tell me something. I enjoy having face to face conversations and knowing that I am being talked to directly.

How to help me

How do you make decisions?

I make decisions by thinking about how they affect those I am working for/with and how they will be perceived by those around me. I want to be sure that I am not hindering my group/coworkers and that I am being beneficial to the team as a whole.

What people misunderstand about me

How to help me

How can people help you?

People can help me by asking what I need and by letting me know why they want to help, that way I can really feel that they want to help me. I am usually easy to trust people because I want to give them the benefit of the doubt, BUT I will not be light on those who abuse that trust and I will not let them ruin it for others who have earned it.

What I don't have patience for

What will you not tolerate in others?

I will not tolerate if someone abuses their power or uses others in an unfair way. I will not tolerate being lied to or being made fun of. I trust people easily because I want them to be as honest as I try to be, but if they harm that trust then I will not hesitate to take it away from them.
